

The Department of Sociology at the University of North Carolina Greensboro invites applications for a one year Visiting Assistant Professor of Sociology position beginning August 2018. We seek a sociological criminologist who can teach a variety of courses in the department's criminology concentrations. Candidates should have a Ph.D. in Sociology or Criminology. Candidates for whom the Ph.D. has not been conferred as of 08/01/2018 will be considered for a Lecturer position, which has additional teaching appointments and a different salary. The successful candidate will be committed to excellence in teaching, scholarly activity, service, and mentoring both undergraduate and graduate criminology students. Applications must include (1) cover letter, (2) curriculum vitae, (3) teaching portfolio, (4) writing sample, and (5) three or more reference letters. All documentation must be submitted electronically through UNCGjobsearch.

Review of applications will begin on 3/19/2018.
